Council to consider contract on Tuesday, June 25

BURBANK, Calif. (June 18, 2013) – Burbank City Council has reached an agreement with veteran city administrator Mark Scott to become Burbank's next City Manager.

Council reached the agreement during closed session tonight and will consider the contract at the next City Council meeting on Tuesday, June 25, 2013.

Under a council-manager form of government, the elected members of Burbank City Council are responsible for hiring a City Manager to serve as the administrative head of the City government.

Mr. Scott currently serves as City Manager for the City of Fresno, a full service city, in which he oversees multiple departments, a staff of 3,100 employees, and an annual budget in excess of $1 billion.

Mr. Scott has extensive city management experience including 20 years with the City of Beverly Hills, 14 of which were as City Manager. He has also served as City Manager for the cities of Spartanburg, South Carolina and Culver City, California. In addition, Mr. Scott has a Master's of Business Administration from Stanford University and is a 35-year member of the International City Management Association (ICMA).

Mr. Scott will replace Ken Pulskamp, who joined the City of Burbank December 3, 2012, to serve as Interim City Manager until a permanent replacement was selected. Mr. Scott will assume the office on August 1, 2013.
